LICHGRONG, JUNE 25win 1873.

Six months ago when commenting on a de- force of his native eloquence. But his largest cision of H B.M. Supreme Court at Shang- operations leave no trace behind, except the per cent for the management of a ship and dispensable aid to the merchant, -of the cargo. The Chief Judge, excluding broker is, however, employed by the merfield that the only ground of com- hai, we must maintain that this represents mission was work done, and he thereupon out the true relative position of the parties. down the one-per-cent, charge to an arbitrary sum appointing to about one-third of what the 22nd inst., and the Bombay, Glaucus, and that rate would have ielded.

In contrast to Sir EDMUND HORNDY's low conception of a merchant's commission, is his somewhat exaggerated idea of a broker's. post at Canton, accompanied with his suite. For solling a steamer he awarded, as an arbitrator; 5 per cent, to the broker, in a case where no understanding existed between the marine before the completion of the sale and iff the recent action referred to by us on the 19th instant, we now learn from the northern papers that the Judge put it to the Jury about as strongly as anything could b put from the Bench, that in the absence of upon the undesirableness of people holding two any covenant the broker was cutitled to receive 5 per cent. on the sale of a steamer simply because he claimed it. To our mind, this involves a radical misapprobension the relations of the parties, and some of the in getting at the holes in her botton outside, as sparring that took place between the Judge she is imbedded in the mud. She will, when and Counsel shows pretty plainly where Sir EDMUND HORNEY's fallacy lies. He evidently "cannot get it through his wool," as our Yankee cousins would say, that there is any difference between the position of an agent, who is acting for a principal 10,000 miles away, and a go-between who merely conveys a message from one house to another, and takes back an answer-having no more responsibility in the matter than the chaircoolies who carry him. A vein of pleasant irony runs through the Judge's remarks take place at an early date, to terminate near whenever the relations of compission-agent and a broker come up for discussion. "What more," he asked in triumph, "did a commission-agent do than a broker?" and he adds, in the tone of genial Banter, which relieves so much the dullness of the law-courts, that though " he did not wish to maintain that a broker was not a very inferior animal to a commission-agent, at least in Shanghai, yet he did not see any material distinction."

But the distinction nevertheless is well marked, as much so as that between the Lord Chancellor and his wine-merchant, or between the contractor for a Railway and the Comhas done, and not perceive the absurdity of answer, but we think the subject of sufficient importance to the commercial community to point out as well as we are able, the differences which in the practical arrangements of business are assumed to exist between a broker and a merchant-or, what is the same thing. a commission-agent-differences which it is simple folly to ignore.

A merchant-firm, or commission-agent, affords, or professes to afford, a standing guarantee to the whole world. It keeps up an establishment, occupies premises more or less expensive, under a tenure more or less periounent; its location is well-known, and was only about $2.50.

its door is never closed. By all these means and suggested to the parties that it would be the commission-agent gives hostages to the very desirable if the mutter could be settled. public. His success, moreover, depends on his being so to speak rooted to the soil where he takes up his abode; on his maintaining a character for prudence, probity and vigilance; on his being always ready to carry out orders from any part of the world. He requires capital and credit to enable him to hold his position; and important changes in that position such as the retirement and introduction of partners, are required to be advertised in the public prints for a long period of time, that "the world" may be fully informed of the constitution of the firm. And the duties of the commission agent, even when they involve little mere work, are of an onerous kind. | money

He has to keep his constituents regularly and precisely advised on all points which can be of service to them; he has to plan and show that she really is murried, judgment would the same description as one be had, of a peouling carry out long-protracted operations, to bear the brunt of failure, and endure all the anxieties incidental to trade. His financial responsibilities are also very considerable, and he has often to protect the interest of his constituents to his last penny, Becoming their banker and their surety whenever the occasion requires it, and incurring risks of loss which cannot be guarded against. To compare the claims for remuneration of such a man to those of an ordinary broker, still more to depreciate them below the broker's, seems to us little less than a wild absurdity. What is the position of a broker in a place like Hongkong or Shanghai? In the first place he comes and goes us he pleases, and is never inissed:

> A youth light-hearted and content, He wanders through the world, liere Arab-like is pitched his tent,

Which straight again is furled. His local habitation is a room at the Club, his capital consists of an unpaid washing bill, and a quarter's subscription to the Club paid in advance; his plant is a trap and pony, usually taken on tick. If a man of taste, the broker probably prefers silver-plated harness, and a high-stepping pony, but these are matters of detail, the essential point being that he keeps a trap; for that according to the Chief Judge is the mark of a Shanghai broker, just as to keep a gig is one infallible sign of a gentleman. The habits of the broker are as acule, migratory. In the autumn, heis busy with his griffins and his lotteries; in tody. Has witnesses to this effect, the winter, sport in various forms claims his attention, and he is in great force after a few weeks pig-shooting. January and February probably find him oscillating between the defendant, and was surprised by finding him Happy Valley and the Club Steps in Queen's Road; and the suppy showers of April find him again among his griffins. In the intervals of his recreation he makes a dash at " pidgin," to supply himself with pocketmoney; and right vigorously he goes to work. Getting into his trap, the broker we presume goes the rounds in an hour or so, anatching the detendant was apprehended. at any crumbs which may full from anybody' table, and sometimes in his eagerness we doubt not upsetting the table itself in order the more quickly to finger what is on it. PUNTI AND MANDARIN PRONUNCIATION. As Anglo-Chinese Dictionary, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong.

INOR comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Obinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and. in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extenso. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are the best principle hitherto attained: The typo- tf 167! Hongkong, Shanghai, Cologne (Germany.) in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications. To illustrate the vast scope of the work, the following facts are submitted for consideration. Chalmers! Vocabularly contains about 16,000 Chinese characters, and Medburst's English and Chinese Dictionary about 100,000, whilst this work contains more than 50,000 English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters. Again, despite all the grammer, and other elementary works as yet published, the student of this difficult language absolutely requires examples to display the various appli-cations and equivalents of different words which have one general meaning. Of these examples this work contains more than five times as many as any other Dictionary bitherto published. For practical purposes the arrangement of the work is so complete, that a reference to its pages enables a person who underwith natives who understand nothing but Chinese. In this respect the work will be found indispensable to all Europeans residing in China, and to the natives themselves it explains subjects fully with which very few indeed of them are perfectly acquainted. To parties resident in England and interested in TYHE American Ship It comprises upwards of two thousand large
